THE GAZETTE.
The Greatest of Blizzards.—Reminiscences of the Great Three Days' Snow Storm in Minnesota.

The great storm of 1873 was the most violent known in the Northwest for fifty years, as the records kept at Fort Snelling showed. It was a violent electrical storm, extending over the whole Northwest, so that the telegraph wires west of Chicago refused to work.

It struck Minnesota on the 7th of January, 1873, and raged for three days, the wind blowing a gale, the temperature being about eighteen degrees below zero, and on the prairies the air was filled with snow as fine as flour. Through every crevice, keyhole and nail hole the snow penetrated, puffing into houses like steam. The number of human lives lost in Minnesota was about seventy.

The morning of January 7, 1873, was beautiful and bright. The air was mild and still, and farmers set out for town or went to neighboring farms with their teams. Generally it was thought that a "January thaw" was imminent; but Prof. Humiston, who had a good anemoid barometer, foretold a storm. The barometer had been falling for twenty-four hours, and never was known to fall so low before.

Between twelve and one o'clock a white wall was seen moving up from the northwest upon Worthington. The front of the storm was distinct and almost as clearly outlined as a great sheet. When it struck the town, farmers began to scatter to their homes. A number, however, remained, and were housed for three days. Persons visiting in the village, only a few squares from home, in some instances remained until the storm abated, not daring to venture out upon the streets.

J. H. Maxwell drove four miles against the storm and then took refuge with a neighboring farmer, not being able to reach home. The Rev. Mr. Stone walked five miles facing the storm this side of Jackson, and finally took refuge in a sod shanty. A party of Worthington men, among whom were Dr. Langdon and Cornelius Stout, were caught on the road between Worthington and Jackson and also remained showed up in a sod house. A man north of Worthington was caught on the trackless prairie driving an ox team. He unhitched and unyoked the team, then took hold of one ox by the tail, and by twisting it, kept the animal on the trot. The other ox followed, and the man brought up against his own wood pile. The school in Indian Lake township was taught by a young lady in a log school-house. The snow drifted in through the crevices, and soon covered the floor. The supply of wood was soon exhausted, and then the teacher and scholars split up furniture and eked out a scant fire until the storm abated. To keep up circulation they formed an Indian file and marched around the stove through the dreary days and nights till, on the third day they made their escape. Joseph Pugh was caught in the storm in the western part of the county, and lay for several days in a sod house. Unfortunately his feet became exposed, kicked the cover off, so to speak, and both feet were frozen and had to be amputated.

A Mr. Small, who lived four miles southeast of Worthington, started from town with an ox team and sled just after the storm struck us. He drove within a few rods of his own door, and wandered over the prairie till he came to some hay stacks, around which a rail fence had been built. He evidently attempted to climb the fence, but was too near gone to accomplish it. When found, the day after the storm, he was standing with one hand on the fence, covered with ice, and as stiff as an icicle. A Mrs. Bliet, who lived a few miles beyond Mr. Small, went to the stable when the storm came on to turn the cattle in. In attempting to return to the house the snow blinded her, and she wandered off on the prairie and perished.

But the one case, among the three fatal ones in Nobles County, which has been the subject of the greatest interest, because of the ghost-story connected with it, was that of John Weston, of Seward township. Mr. Weston had been to Graham lakes and was returning with a load of wood when the storm caught him. He drove across his own farm and missed the house. Turned and went in a circle, making the same circle twice, as shown by the tracks of the sled. He then turned north to the vicinity of the place now owned by H. D. Winters, in Graham Lakes township. He abandoned his team, and the oxen, after wandering awhile, turned the yoke and choked to death. Mr. Weston, from this point, evidently concluded to walk with the storm, and made a bee line for Hershey. He walked about twelve miles and fell forward on his face, clutching the grass as he fell and the blood gushing from his nose. His body was found the following spring, with his hands full of grass and the blood on his face.

The story of John Weston's ghost was first published in the Advertiser and widely copied so that it became known throughout the country. Weston appeared to the country, who is still a resident of Seward township, and was an intimate friend to Weston. A few days ago we caught Mr. Cosper in town and had the story from his own lips. He is a practical, unimaginative man, and gives the story in a circumstantial way.

The day after the storm Mr. Cosper had been out with some neighbors searching for Weston's body. He had returned to his home and was at the stable feeding his stock just before sundown. He came out of the stable, and passing around to the east end, saw John Weston coming up the path from the creek. Weston had on the blue soldier overcoat which he usually wore. His hands were tucked up under the cape, and he approached Cosper with his usual smile and usual salutation, saying, "How goes it?" Cosper said, "Why, Weston, I thought you were frozen to death!" Weston replied, "I am, and you will find my body a mile and a half north-west of Hershey!" Saying this he vanished. Mr. Cosper says that even after Weston was gone it took him some time to realize that he had seen a ghost and to "feel queer."

Before this Weston had evidently announced his death to his wife. Mrs. Weston related the incident and it was confirmed by her son. The second night of the storm she was awakened by a knock at the door. She dozed off again, and was aroused by a second rap, when she asked, "What is wanted?" A voice answered, "Did you know that John was frozen to death?" The voice sounded like that of her brother, Mr. Linderman, who lived in the vicinity. The boy heard the voice and rising up to bed, said, "Mother, I'll undo, say, you were frozen to death?" Mrs. Weston went to the door, but there was no one there, and no tracks could be found in the snow. Mr. Linderman had not been there, and it seems that Weston, wishing to announce his death, and at the same time not to frighten his wife too much, assumed the voice of his brother-in-law.

Now for the confirmation of Cosper's story. He told it at once and it was published throughout the country before the winter was over. Search was made for Weston's body but in vain. When spring came, however, and the snow began to melt off, Weston's body was found near a slough where the snow had been deep, a mile and a half northwest of Hershey. We believe Mr. Erickson, who now lives in Worthington, was the first to discover the body.

So much for the great blizzard. There will probably not be another such in our day. It was a rough greeting for the early settlers of Nobles County, but they can all testify that Boreas has been comparatively mild ever since, except in putting the screws on the mercury and bringing it down tight occasionally.—Worthington Advance.

The Jangus of Terre Del Fuego.

Among the most interesting observations made by Lieutenant Bove in Terre del Fuego, are those on the Jangus tribe, which counts about 3,000 individuals, who inhabit a portion of the southwest of the country. With slight abridgment the London Daily News gives the account in Lieutenant Bove's own words:

The Jangus impress one as a poor race. In general the men are scarcely more than of medium stature, while the women rarely reach it. The faces of this race are round, large and flat, with high cheek bones, low foreheads and large flat noses, very black and restless eyes, wide apart, large, thick lips, and strong fangs for the teeth, with beautiful teeth. The head and chest are disproportionately large compared to the extreme slenderness of arms and legs, and it is a marvel how the latter can support the well-developed trunk and head. In spite of this strange formation, both men and women have uncommon strength, and I have seen them carry weights that would have taxed the robustest of our sailors. No less surprising is the smallness of their hands and feet, which, if a beauty, is very advantageous to the men, who can carry only one or two objects in their hands at the same time. They have rough, lustreless black hair, which they wear long and falling over face and shoulders. Some bind it with a leather strap, but most let it grow to such an extent that they look more like furies than human beings. The men have very little beard and that little they pluck out. They do not tattoo, but use all kinds of paint. Two or three hues of color on the face and a few necklaces of shells or birds' bones is the usual dress of the Fuegians. For protection against the terrible hurricanes, the snows that fall during the ten months in the year, and the torrential rains that daily visit this miserable archipelago, the Fuegians only wear a small mantle of seal or guanaco skin over his shoulders. The wigwags are only made of intertwined branches fixed in some sheltered spot, but they are too weak to keep out snow and rain. These wigwags are used by the Fuegians who dwell near the few residents of Ushuamata or round the mission. The other natives scarcely ever remain more than one or two days in the same place; they lead a vagrant life in their small canoes among the complicated canals of this broken up country, fishing and hunting for their subsistence, of which the sea furnishes a larger part. The women are looked upon as slaves, and the greater part of the work falls to their share. I have often seen the men sitting quietly round a good fire while the poor women were exposed in fragile skiffs to the snow, wind and waves, fishing for their idle and angry husbands. The greater the number of wives or slaves a man has, the easier for him it is to find a living; hence the practice of polygamy which is so rooted among the Fuegians that in spite of the efforts of the missionaries it is no rare thing to see a convert suddenly break through restraint and add two or more wives to the one allowed him by the new religion. But, though a Fuegian may marry as many wives as he pleases, he seldom makes more than four, and even with that small number it is difficult to preserve domestic peace. The wigwag is the scene of daily battles, and sometimes the prettiest of the wives pays with her life the preference of her husband. Sometimes, however, the wives all unite against their common husband. The girls begin to hunt for husbands at ten to twelve years of age. The men marry at fourteen or sixteen years of age. The marriages are dictated by convenience, and are a matter of sale and purchase rather than of love or reciprocal sympathy. The father chooses from among the suitors for his daughter the one who is strongest, most dexterous, and docile to his wishes, and fixes the number of skins to be given and days that his son-in-law has to work for him. A canoe, spears and harpoons form the dowry, and the bride, when settled, must be her sentiments, she takes good care to show no resistance to her father, and is taken away to her husband's wigwag. But generally the father's choice is also the daughter's, for nowhere do strength and dexterity make a greater impression than upon the Fuegian girls, who fly from a crooked or deformed man, as from an impure being—a pariah. There is no feast or wedding ceremony. The bride simply goes to her husband's wigwag, or he establishes himself in that of her father. But some rules have to be observed. If the husband wishes to continue to eat the flesh of the guanaco, or seal, he must take a purifying bath in the sea the morning after his wedding. Such a bath, especially in the depth of the winter, is no doubt often the cause of many of the maladies to which the Fuegians are subject. The children seldom all survive their parents, for the mortality between two to ten years of age is extraordinary. The variable and frigid climate, the want of nourishment, the terrible heats, and bad treatment by the parents, are the chief causes of the death of these miserable infants, yet unarmed against the frightful struggle for existence. The mother's love lasts, it may be said, until the babe is weaned, after which affection rapidly diminishes as the child grows, and is completely gone as the latter attains the age of seven or eight years. At this age the parents have no more authority over the boys, who go out and come as they like, and are never asked what they are doing. The only lasting love in the heart of a Fuegian is the love of life. When I saw a father devouring a piece of meat or bread, while his famishing wives and children silently picked him up the crumbs that fell from his mouth and darning ravenously upon the miserable remnants thrown to them by the ferocious head of the family. As there are no family ties, the word "authority" is devoid of meaning among the Fuegians. Every family enjoys the utmost independence, and only the need of common defense induce a few families to form a small tribe. But no one has a right to set himself up as a chief and direct the actions of the others; offensive expeditions are fixed by common accord, and the products of the chase are equally distributed among those who have taken part in it.

Notice is hereby given that all accounts due the Gazette printing company previous to January 1, 1893, have been assigned to R. L. Colvin and Isaac Farnsworth, who will collect the same under the firm name of Colvin & Farnsworth. All persons indebted to the Gazette printing company are especially requested to settle by paying cash or giving notes, as the business of the old firm must be settled without delay.

COLVIN & FARNSWORTH.
Janesville, Feb. 6th, 1893.

$1,000 reward to any one that will read the Imperial Highway, and will not say that every parent should have it in their house.

CARPETS—The great sale of carpets still goes on at the New York Cash Store. More carpets sold in February than ever before sold in the same month. Low prices make lively times in our carpet room. We shall continue to make 10 per cent discount from the very lowest prices until March 15th.

M. C. SMITH.

Don't forget to buy and read the Imperial Highway, published by G. W. B. Low, 103 State street Chicago.

Card of Thanks.

I take this public method of expressing my most sincere and heartfelt thanks to the party (to save whose blushes of modesty I will not mention names) who has with so much disinterestedness and evident expense advertised my business so extensively and minutely in the two daily papers of Janesville for the last two days. Once more I thank him. 'Twas done in kindness, no doubt, and may his bed be of roses, and his life filled with sweet perfumes. He has brought particular notice and many dollars to my great book and music sale in Cannon's block. Do it again and again accept my thanks. Most profoundly impressed, I remain yours obliged,

W. B. F. HYDE,
Cannon's block.

Who sells books and music cheaper than anybody—Catalogues or no catalogues.

A Card of Welcome.

In reply to the communication of Mr. Hyde, in which he extends to me such heartfelt thanks (?) for advertising him, permit me to say, he is entirely welcome. I shall endeavor to favor him in like manner in the future. When a person comes here and announces on his printed list that he retails books at less than whole sale prices, the trick should be exposed. This I have done. Mr. Hyde knows that this is the source of his trouble. It is this and the further fact that persons come from his store every day and purchase at the old pioneer bookstore, that makes him squal. Regretting that the Hyde has proven more sensitive than the conscience, I am in hearty welcome.

Special and Important Notice to the Public.

The manager of the Gazette takes pleasure in making the announcement that the price of the Daily Gazette has been reduced to $1.50 a quarter, 50 cents a month, or one shilling a week, commencing February 1st, thus placing it within the reach of every family in the city and making it by all odds the cheapest daily newspaper published in the state.

He also gives the notice that the circulation of the Gazette has been placed in the hands of Mr. Will H. Chey.

GAZETTE PRINTING COMPANY.

Briefts.

—Mestayer's "Tourists" will give a performance in the opera house next Thursday evening.

—Hon. John Conley, of Clinton, member of the assembly from the third district, was in the city to-day.

—Mr. Howard W. Tilton, formerly city editor of the Gazette, arrived in the city last evening, and is heartily welcomed by his many Janesville friends.

—As the condition of the roads in the country is becoming improved, farmers are again commencing the marketing of produce in this city, and business begins to again show its accustomed activity.

—Mr. Henry Adler, of Chicago, formerly in the clothing trade in this city, with Irwin & Adler, came up from Chicago last evening, for the purpose of a few days visit with old time friends.

—The social re-union of the Odd Fellows and their families, at their hall last evening, was the largest one held this winter. The hall was crowded, and all enjoyed a social evening's entertainment. Luckwood's band was in attendance.

—The thermometer at twelve o'clock last night registered at zero. Clear sky and a north wind, but the wind soon changed to west, heavy clouds appeared, and at seven o'clock this morning the register stood at 19 degrees above zero, with indications of a snow storm.

—Mr. Aaron T. Pope, of the town of Janesville, and Miss Jennie S. Bergh, formerly of this city, but now of St. Paul, Minnesota, were married in the latter city last evening. Their many friends in Janesville and vicinity extend hearty congratulations.

—Marshal Chamberlain, of Edgerton, was in the city to-day, with two additional boarders for the Harper house, under a sentence of twenty days each at hard labor. This pair makes the total number contributed from Edgerton this week foot up nine.

—Two tramps, one of whom had just finished a term of nine days on a bread and water diet, and the other a term of fifteen days, were turned out of the jail yesterday morning, but found their way back last night. They will undoubtedly receive another dose—perhaps for a longer period.

—Mr. Francis C. Grant, who has been in attendance upon the Jefferson county circuit court the past week, returned home yesterday. The Jefferson Banner pays Mr. Grant the following compliment: "Mr. Francis C. Grant, one of Judge Bennett's court reporters, who is very popular among the members of the bar, occupied the reporter's desk during the Korisch trial. He is a genial wholesome gentleman who has many warm and admiring friends in Jefferson."

—Yesterday afternoon the ladies of the Daughters of Rebecca sewing circle assembled at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Howland, in the second ward, for the regular semi-monthly meeting, and in the evening a large number of Odd Fellows, by special invitation, assembled at the same place for the purpose of partaking of the beautiful hospitalities of Mr. and Mrs. Howland. The party, although large, were all entertained in the best manner, and a few hours were pleasantly spent in social conversation, when they all joined the social in Odd Fellows' hall.

—The lecture at St. Patrick's church, last night, was largely attended, and ably delivered, by Rev. Father Damsen. The fluency of his language and his graceful gestures, combined with his practical ideas, and earnestness of purpose, leave an indelible impression on his hearers. The Rev. Father VanderUrd, of Milwaukee, who is assisting at the mission exercises, and who is also of the Jesuit order, preached an interesting sermon at the 8:30 o'clock mass, this morning. "Transubstantiation," is the subject announced for next Sunday evening's lecture.

—Last evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Boylan, on Western avenue, in the fifth ward, was thrown into deep mourning by the death of their daughter Ella Elizabeth, aged sixteen years, after a short illness of typhoid pneumonia. This is the third time within a few years, that the Angel of Death has visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Boylan, taking a member of their family as its victim. Ella received all the consolations of her religion; she had for some time been a member of the Young Ladies' Sodality, and was very attentive to her duties as such. The family will receive the deep sympathy of a large number of friends in this last sad bereavement. The funeral will take place at St. Patrick's church, on Sunday, but the hour has not yet been announced. Rev. Father McGinnity will officiate.

—At about eleven o'clock this forenoon, a little accident occurred at the corner of Main and East Milwaukee streets, by which a horse and cutter belonging to Mr. John Griffiths were more or less injured. Mr. Griffiths and E. D. McKinney were driving up Main street at a good gait, McKinney a little in the lead. When reaching the Milwaukee street crossing, the Johnstown stage passed before McKinney's horse, which was compelled to turn out, to avoid running into the stage team. In doing this, he pulled in front of Griffiths', and slackened his speed, which seemed to be unnoticed, and Griffiths, with horse and cutter, piled on McKinney. There was a wreck of cutters, commotion among the drivers, and Griffiths' horse was somewhat injured. The drivers blame no one but themselves; and as no ordinance was violated, nothing more was done except gathering up the wreck and putting up the horses. The stage escaped unharned.

—City Clerk Charles E. Church met with a severe and painful accident last evening, on Milwaukee street bridge, by breaking the small bone of his left leg, just above the ankle joint. Mr. Church had been in attendance at the meeting of the Knights Templar in Masonic hall, and was hurriedly crossing over the bridge to Messrs. F. C. Cook & Co.'s jewelry store, for the purpose of meeting his wife, and then attend the Odd Fellows social. On leaving Masonic hall, he threw his overcoat over his shoulders, when opposite the meat market, he started obliquely across the bridge, and in stepping from the side walk he stepped onto a ridge of ice, his left foot slipped and caught against the raised edge of the walk, which threw him on his left side. He turned over on his right side, and in attempting to regain his feet discovered the break above. He was assisted to reach the jewelry store. He was then taken to his home on the corner of Bluff and Terrace streets, in the first ward, where Dr. C. G. Chittenden & Son, attended to his injuries. While the break is not so severe as it might have been, it will be some days, if not weeks, before he will be able to take his accustomed walk, but with the aid of crutches, he thinks he will be able to be down town shortly.

—Mr. John Kelly, who, for the past eight years, has been employed in the works of the New Gas Light company, now contemplates resigning his position for the purpose of engaging in some other business, which he has not yet decided upon. The employees in the gas works work in two reliefs, day and night; in the winter season two men are employed in each relief, and in the summer season but one. These reliefs are so arranged that the first relief commences work on Monday evening at six o'clock and remains on duty during the night, or until seven o'clock the next morning, when they are relieved by the day lads; this is continued until the next Monday night, when the day relief changes hours with the night force, remains for the same length of time. Mr. Kelly having had eight years of this kind of day and night work, has come to the conclusion that he will try his hand at something else, and as soon as arrangements can be made for a competent man to take his place, he proposes to throw up his position. In a conversation with him last evening, he exacted a promise from us that we would not make mention of a word that he proposed leaving, on account of any dissatisfaction with his "superior officers" in the company, and remarked that a better man could not be found on earth to work for than Mr. Merrill, whom he had cause to admire in more ways than one; but that he left the works solely on account of becoming tired of night work. Mr. Kelly's many personal friends in the city will wish him success in whatever new business he may engage.

—An Old Settler Gone.

Mr. Jonathan Cory, one of the old settlers of Rock county, died at his home at Footville, this morning, at the age of 67. About one year ago, he was prostrated by paralysis from which he did not fully recover. Some six weeks ago he had the misfortune to break his hip by a fall which was the immediate cause of his death.

Mr. Cory was a native of Ohio, and settled at Footville in 1840, where he owned a large farm. He served one term in the assembly in 1863. He was a prominent Mason, and was also a conspicuous leader in the grange movement. He was a man of unflinching integrity and deeply esteemed by a wide circle of acquaintances.

The funeral service will take place at the church at Footville to-morrow afternoon at one o'clock.

What Three Applications Did.

"I was troubled very much with sore feet. Three applications of Thomson's Electric Oil entirely cured them. Nothing better in the market." Jacob Butler, Reading, Pa.

At the Risk.

The rink was again crowded last night by a large number of ladies and gentlemen to witness the amusement of those on roller skates. The exhibitions given by Mr. and Mrs. Richardson, and Mr. Smith and Master Jackson, were really fine, and received frequent applause. A large number of ladies and gentlemen of this city availed themselves of an opportunity to try on the skates, and there was amusement for all. The rink will be open again this evening, with good music in attendance, and there will no doubt be a large attendance.

HOGBOOM & ATWOOD.

Mr. Frank Work claims that his team has made the fastest time on record—that of a mile in 2:16½—while Mr. Vandorbet claims that his team has made the same distance in 2½. The record of COLE'S VETERINARY CARBOLIZALINE for horses has never been equalled.

For SALE—A large number of Rock county farms, desirable city residences and some business property in the city. Some of which will be sold at speculation prices.

H. H. BLANCHARD.

Municipal Court.

Notwithstanding that to-day was preceded by a national holiday, aside from the tramps who infest the country, no new business was transacted in this court to-day. Not even a drunk.

To-day being set for the court to pass sentence upon James Murray, convicted of an assault with intent to do great bodily harm, the prisoner was brought into court this forenoon and sentenced to one year in the county jail at hard labor.

Five tramps were before the court during the day, four of whom, upon a promise to leave the city, were allowed to go. The fifth, who had been before the court two or three times before, was given fifteen days on bread and water in the jail. One of the gang who we allowed to leave the city, was a tall dirty looking specimen of humanity, who appeared to be a deaf mute, hailing from Portage, enroute for Freeport. He was in the city yesterday begging money, to aid him in making the trip, but was arrested last evening, beastly drunk, and lodged in the jail. He is undoubtedly a fraud, as he wrote a very bad hand for a mute, and does not act like one. He is evidently "working" at it. He gave his name as Normal, Witebern.

Detectives and Private Officers.

Usually wear their badges of authority concealed under their clothing, but Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil wears its badge in the form of printed labels attached to each and every bottle, so that all may know its mission. It is given full and complete authority to arrest all aches and pains, and does its duty every time. Sold by Palmer & Stevens and Sherer & Co.

Mental Agitation Bordering on Aberration.

To the Editor.

JANESVILLE, Feb. 21st, 1893.

With a mental agitation bordering on aberration, I write this communication, and send to you with trepidation. Not for any speculation, for I ask no compensation. It is written for recreation, while taking a short vacation from my usual occupation. And is not a revelation indicated by inspiration. Neither is it a translation, but simply a recitation of the trials and tribulations of a boy, whose reputation is a particular location, was never cited for imitation. Who, without any provocation, of his own accord, and when in the company of a deaf-mute, and when with accusation, invented a base fabrication, involving others, by intimidation, but could not bring substantiation to sustain the implication, and he received a flagellation, that was nearly extirpation, and from the exclamation, there arose such inflammation, it was to him excruciating, and made him utter an exclamation that sounded much like profanation.

It thus reaches its destination without any legislation, and upon examination, it is in your estimation, worthy of publication in your splendid aggregation, (whose increasing circulation among the learned population, of this municipal corporation, must be to you a gratification, and if sometime in your relation, you feel like having a justification, just you set out a nice collation, and I'll be there, "in imagination.")

Then the rising generation, by their higher education, derived from this communication, can make a better preparation, (by avoiding provocation,) to prevent a realization of a rigid castigation, that brings to them a great prostration, also much mortification, and afterwards humiliation.

If the present administration, and those engaged in legislation, do desire a continuation in their office, without rotation, and would secure re-nomination, they should read this dissertation, to understand the situation of the subject of the narration, and then should make the application to themselves, in their relation to the people of the nation, from whom they are a deputization, selected for their information, and sent to act by representation, (but only taken on probation.)

If they work with animation to meet the public expectation, (not with a great ostentation and mutual self admiration, but with a quiet deliberation, taking time for consideration,) remembering their obligation to the people, surrounded with temptation, and also heed the demonstration that was made in indignation at the last appropriation for internal navigation, and the earnest determination for a thorough investigation of the star route speculation, also, the solicitation for civil service reformation, then they will earn our approbation, and will receive remuneration.

And when they come for relaxation, we'll appoint a delegation to meet them at the railway station, escort them to their destination, receive them with great emotion, (they will deliver an oration that will be free from crimination. They'll have to make no explanation, and that will save them much vexation. They will not need a vindication, for there has been no violation.) We'll have a rousing jubilation, we'll send them back by acclamation, and think of them with veneration.

If not deserving commendation, but do deserve a condemnation, they may not get a "castigation." (Please excuse the severity for its use as a castigation.) They'll receive a notification, in other words an invitation, to present their resignation, for their constituents acceptance, and then return to their plantation, (or Indian reservation beyond the pale of civilization,) there to remain in isolation, with plenty of time for meditation, and nothing for a consolation, amid a moral degradation from which they'll find there is no situation, or even hope of regeneration from a political damnation.

Postoffice Inspector J. D. King in the role of a Horse Buyer.

The Cedar Rapids Evening Gazette, of the 21st, contains a two column and a half article detailing the capture of Fleming B. Lewis, of that city, by postoffice inspectors J. D. King, of this city, and A. C. Beards, charged with stealing a registered mail pouch. By reading the account we see that "Dug" did some very clever work in "shadowing" his man. The Evening Gazette, of Cedar Rapids, says:

"The 'mystery' as to who stole the registered mail pouch on the night of the 8th of February, has been a constant theme of conversation, and there were as many different theories as there were people who expressed an opinion concerning it. But the facts have now all been unearthed, and with them the money, or the most of it and the natural desire is to know how it was done.

As the robbery occurred, two government detectives, Messrs. A. C. Beards and J. D. King, were detailed to investigate the case, and came to the city under assumed names, taking rooms at the Northwestern hotel. They were here ostensibly for the purpose of buying horses, and as such, 'got in' with the boys around the Union depot and found out 'which was which,' and all about the 'day of the land.' Several persons were shown to a fine point, and 'one by one' their noses were 'pegged' until the 'dukeberry' were were singled out as 'their game.' A sorry day was it for 'Shorty' Lewis, when he could not be looked upon as was Caesar's wife—above suspicion. But human nature is very 'flexible' and very much like the world over, and men whose business it is to study the peculiarities of people, and find out what they would do under such and such circumstances, get it down to such a degree of certainty that they can "spot" err-doers in good shape.

Fleming B. Lewis, as he has fully confessed, stole the pouch alone and undisturbed, taking it from the baggage room, where it had been left by the transfer man. He cut it open in the alley back of the depot, took out the letters, and from thence to the rear of the Grand, claims to have walked along First avenue with them in his arms, and put them in his back, when he drove to his stable. He then took the letters back to Seares & Baxter's, an "inhabitable" work, where he took them to his room, and hid them from the contents. He went into the Grand hotel about 1 o'clock that night, and into the postoffice about half past four the same night, or rather the next morning, and asked the boys if it was so that the pouch had been stolen.

In detailing his doings he says he took the money to his home, a pleasant little residence on the west side near the upper bridge, and told his wife he had found the letters, but says she did not believe him, and tried to get him to give them up, a thing he declares he would have gladly done, but the trouble was to let go of it. Among the papers were a lot of notes, mortgages, drafts, coupons and other valuables, such as written depositions, etc., and there were also two $50 money orders, all of which he burned.

Everybody Knows It.

Everybody knows what red clover is. It has been used many years by the good old German women and physicians for the blood, and is known as the best blood purifier when properly prepared. Combined with other medical herbs and roots, it forms Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which is good for all blood disorders, torpid liver, constiveness and sick headache. Sure cure for pimples. Ask Stearns & Baker, druggists, for it. Only fifty cents a bottle.

THE LARGEST and finest assortment of Hair goods ever brought to Janesville can be seen at Mrs. William Suddlers, opera house block.
